

CampCruiser

A camp tent on a Bay River Skiff, predecessor to the CS 17.

With the addition of some optional boat canvas, the CS 17 becomes a comfortable and capable shoal water cruiser.

The wind, water, and islands are all the same, and just as enjoyable regardless of how you get there.

The CS 17 gets you there much cheaper than the big keel boats.

View from the tent cockpit.
Is it sunrise or sunset?

A spray dodger on a CS 17.

This one, not only, encloses the sleeping compartment, but a privacy panel allows use of a Porta Potti underway!

Sunrise or sunset, it don't much matter.
It is just as fetching, whether on a CoreSound 17 or a forty-footer.

Sneak in where the big boats can't go and have the anchorage to yourself.

When your done camping, bring the boat home and avoid all of the yard bills. Having the boat at home on a trailer saves time and money, as you can work on it at home and are not dependant on tradesmen.

Optional, convertible floorboards, in the forepeak, are down during the day and up at night to make a large bed.
